Phần mềm antivirus free tốt nhất. Phần mềm diệt virus cho android tốt nhất 2020.

Although you likely have your own favorite antivirus solution, it's a good idea to keep an eye on what products are considered best by AV-Test, a well-respected independent IT-security institute. AV-Test ran tests on Windows PCs and Androids in 2015 and yesterday announced the award winners for both home users and corporate users. The results were broken down into categories covering protection, performance, usability, repair and even best Android security. Best protection awards Symantec walked away with the coveted "best protection" award for both home and corporate Windows users. Symantec Norton Security won "best protection" for consumers, while Symantec Endpoint Protection won for the corporate solution. A happy Symantec explained, "Security solutions are subjected to over 1,000 live zero-day attacks delivered via infected websites and e-mail to measure a product's complete protection ability. In addition, AV-Test measures the security solution's detection of more than 150,000 current and widespread threats." One category under "protection" deals with how well a product protects users from zero-day attacks. The industry average, according to AV-Test, is 97.9%. Symantec offered 98.3% protection against zero-day attacks for its consumer product and 100% against zero-days for its corporate product. Best performance awards Plenty of companies have good security products, but some result in a serious hit to speed. This has nothing to do with high-end PC gaming, but instead looks for how speed is affected for typical users launching websites, downloading software, copying data and installing apps. After checking for the solution that had "the least negative influence on the speed of a Windows PC," AV-Test gave three awards for "best performance." Bitdefender and Kaspersky Lab tied as the best for consumers, while Bitdefender won as the best performance for corporate users. For home users, Bitdefender Internet Security showed "hardly any negative impact" on speed, while Kaspersky Internet Security demanded only a "few PC resources." Bitdefender Endpoint Security won for corporate users as AV-Test said it "proved in all six laboratory tests in the year 2015 the fact that outstanding protection doesn't necessarily require a heavy system load." Best usability awards When it comes to usability, AV-Test checked for which products don't freak out users by showing false positives or wrongly blocking harmless websites; the tests included visiting thousands of sites and installing hundreds of programs. Again there were three winners; Avira AntiVirus Pro and Kaspersky Lab Internet Security took the awards for consumers, while Intel Security McAfee Endpoint Security won for corporate users. Best repair awards If your Windows machine has suffered from a malware attack, what antivirus offers the best repair? Unlike the awards listed above, the winners are not split between consumer and corporate, but as repair "security suite" and its free "stand-alone clean-up tool." The tests, which lasted eight months, included infecting PCs with hundreds of malware samples. Avira AntiVirus Pro won as the best repair security suite and Kaspersky Virus Removal Tool won as the best freeware clean-up tool. Best Android Security AV-Test awarded Bitdefender Mobile Security with the title of best overall security solution for Android as it scored the highest in the categories protection, usability and features. Regarding usability, AV-Test noted, "The Bitdefender app demonstrated no false positives and was easy on mobile device batteries. The extra features are also very interesting for the user." Sophos Mobile Security was also a best Android security winner as it "always attained the best score in the category of protection." The free app scored a perfect 100% detection rate after it was "required to scan, detect and remove just under 3,000 dangerous apps" out of a total 18,000 apps. AV-Test also tipped its hat to Sophos for the "very useful tools in the extra features area." Use them or don't, but there you have it - the winners - according to an independent security lab. Copyright © 2016 IDG Communications, Inc. Free antivirus apps don't do much more than scan your device for existing threats. And because they are free, you can expect a lot of ads and a bit of slowdown because of the number of resources they use. After testing several free antivirus apps, my top pick is Sophos Intercept X for Mobile (opens in new tab) because of the extra security tools it comes with and how well it finds malware without causing too much drag. Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central (Image credit: Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central) This app blocks calls and filters text messages for malicious links. Its QR scanner checks each link to make sure they are safe before connecting you or allowing a file to download. Sophos' anti-theft tools let you remotely access stolen phones to wipe data or reset passwords, send text commands to the thieves and track where your phone is. Labor Day sales highlights - Phones, laptops, speakers, and more Sophos has a system scanner that looks for other security issues with your device and helps you secure them. This could be an outdated program or an app running in the background that doesn't need to be. Sophos also isn't overly ad-heavy, so you're not distracted too much or experience slowdown of your phone. The app itself isn't the easiest to figure out how to use. It took me some time to figure out where all the tools are located and how to either enable or disable them. But it is impressive to see the number of features you get with this free app. Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central (Image credit: Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central) Includes VPN: Avast Antivirus This mobile security program has a data shield to protect photos, contact information, and other sensitive files from being seen or swiped by unauthorized apps and hackers. It stops malware before it attacks your device and blocks phishing schemes. It's straightforward to use with most tools displayed on the dashboard front and center. And during virus and security scans, I didn't experience much slowdown on my devices. Avast Antivirus has web protections that help identify dangerous websites known to harbor malicious files and downloads. This is an excellent way to stop threats from infecting your device, though this isn't a true, real-time blocker like those included with Avast's paid version. You also get a VPN with this app to help shield your device from adware and other internet trackers. Avast does have ads, because it is a free program, and it requires a lot of permissions to be given to access every part of your cell phone or tablet. In some ways, this made me uneasy since it doesn't have real-time protection. But I was also impressed with how well it scanned files looking for malware, junk files, and cache to clean up. Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central (Image credit: Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central) Photo Vault: AVG AntiVirus Free AVG AntiVirus includes a photo vault that encrypts your files so they can't be taken hostage by ransomware or accessed without your permission. The VPN connection hides your device's location and information from adware and internet trackers. This app doesn't have real-time malware protection, but it does have deep scans to locate any problems on your cell phone or tablet. It helps you get rid of junk files, so your device runs faster, and will even scan web sites and let you know if they are known to have malicious files or links on them. There was a noticeable lag on my phones while AVG was installed, especially during virus scans. It became increasingly frustrating having to wait a bit longer for apps to open, upload attachments to emails, or while playing a game. While I like how thorough AVG scans for problems, it's too frustrating for me to endure the slowdown. Basic Protection: Bitdefender Free Antivirus Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central (Image credit: Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central) All this app does is scan your device for malware that may have made it onto your phone or tablet. There isn't a safe browsing feature or phishing filters to stop attacks, but its autopilot scans your device often enough to catch threats before they become a problem. You don't have to use the autopilot feature, instead, starting and stopping scans manually. And Bitdefender dives deep into all your files on removable SD cards to ensure nothing is hiding anywhere. During my tests of Bitdefender Free Antivirus, I was able to keep working on my devices without worrying about my system running slower or lagging during a game. I didn't realize there was a scan going on until Bitdefender notified me that it was done. Also, although Bitdefender is a free antivirus app, there aren't a lot of ads that get in the way. The big reason Bitdefender Free Antivirus doesn't take the top spot is that it doesn't offer any other tools. It doesn't have a VPN or anti-theft tools that some of the other apps include. But if you don't need the extra features, then I highly recommend Bitdefender for all your devices. Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central (Image credit: Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central) System Scanner: Lookout Security Depending on the device you have and your cell phone provider, Lookout Security may have already come installed on your phone. This antivirus program frequently scans your phone for any malware and helps you remove it. It also shows you which apps are running in the background and draining your device's battery. Lookout's system advisor continually looks at your operating system for any root issues that may be interfering with how your phone or tablet is working and will help you fix them to secure your device from hackers and other snoops. And it includes some anti-theft tools, including a device locator and remote lockdown. There aren't a lot of other tools or features included with the free version of this app. You can purchase the Premium version that includes file backup and a VPN. But several users find these tools don't work very well and prefer the free version, even without these extra features. Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central (Image credit: Source: Nicole Johnston/Android Central) Adware Removal: Malwarebytes Security This basic antivirus app won't stop malware infection but does an excellent job of rounding up malicious files, including adware, already on your devices. It doesn't use a lot of resources, so you won't experience slow down while Malwarebytes is running. Another perk of Malwarebytes is, despite being a free antivirus program, it's completely ad-free. Malwarebytes detects and stops ransomware before it can encrypt and hold hostage your files and programs. It also recognizes phishing schemes, even in emails, and will alert you of them before you click through or provide personal information. You can try the Premium version for additional tools, including real-time detection and prevention of malware. Still, you will have to pay for these additional features after the trial period ends. Final thoughts I've chosen Sophos Intercept X (opens in new tab) as the best free antivirus app for Android because it does an excellent job of scanning for threats that have made it onto your device. It didn't cause a slowdown on my test devices, plus it comes with an impressive list of features for a free program. These include anti-theft tools that remotely locate, secure, and wipe sensitive information. Sophos also checks links and QR codes before allowing them to open or download, just in case there is a threat attached to it. And while it may take a moment or two to figure out how to use the program, overall, Sophos gives you more security for free. While cell phones are still pretty secure, there is more and more malware being developed explicitly targeting mobile devices. Most free apps come with several in-app ads trying to get you to upgrade to a paid version. Also, most free antivirus apps scan your device for malware after it has become infected rather than stopping threats before they download or attack. I do have a healthy list of the best antivirus apps for Android that have been thoroughly vetted. But that doesn't mean you can't get some reliable protection from a free app. Nicole Johnston writes for multiple Future Publishing brands, including Android Central, covering primarily internet security and privacy programs.
